

OCEAN LINERS AT QUARANTINE CRASH IN FOG

Etruria, Forced to Anchor,
Is Rammed by the Minnehaha.

In the thick mist which hung over the upper bay to-day the giant Atlantic Transport line steamer, Minnehaha, loaded with passengers and live stock for London, crashed into the Cunard line steamer Etruria, off Quarantine. Both vessels were bound out.

The screams of the Etruria's passengers, most of whom were on the decks when the collision occurred, were the first warning those in the quarantine and other Government offices ashore had of the accident.

The fog prevented seeing the two sea monsters and men put off in small boats. The doctors' boats and the revenue cutters were busy with incoming steamships.

As soon as the first small boat returned from the Etruria it was immediately announced that the Etruria had been injured, but the officers had difficulty in quelling the panic which reigned on both vessels.

The Etruria left the Cunard pier, No. 61 North River, at 7:30 A. M. with a large list of cabin passengers and a full cargo. She was carrying much freight. The Minnehaha, with a record load of freight and cattle and many passengers, and started a half hour earlier, but the Etruria was not far behind when the collision occurred. The Etruria was in collision with the Minnehaha, which was moving westward, and the Etruria was moving eastward. The collision occurred at the bow of the Etruria, which was struck on the starboard side. The Etruria was forced to anchor, and the Minnehaha was damaged. The Etruria was carrying a large cargo of live stock, and the collision caused a great deal of damage to the ship and its cargo.

Both ships were towing their way through the mist, watching for the other. Suddenly there was a clanging of bells in the engine-house, a swirling of water as the reversing propellers lifted the Etruria, and the startled passengers screamed and rushed to the lifeboats. The Etruria was struck on the bow, and the Minnehaha was damaged. The Etruria was forced to anchor, and the Minnehaha was damaged. The Etruria was carrying a large cargo of live stock, and the collision caused a great deal of damage to the ship and its cargo.

In a second the reversing engines of the Minnehaha had commenced to back, and the great ship was slowly disappearing in the mist.

But on the deck of the Etruria the excitement was intense. Officers tried to assure the passengers that there was no danger, but the passengers saw the hole in the side of the Etruria, and the information reassured the passengers. Captain Robinson then sent the message by wireless to the Atlantic Transport Line and the Cunard Line offices. "We are in collision with Etruria while trying to anchor off Quarantine. So far as I know no neither ship is damaged, but we are both anchored."

After an investigation Capt. Robinson found that the bow plates of the Minnehaha were bent, but not badly enough to prevent him from going to sea, and when the fog lifted at 10:30 he weighed anchor and started across the Atlantic.

After a careful investigation it was found that the Etruria was not injured badly as to prevent her voyage, and she will go to sea at high tide this afternoon.

MAID ACCUSED OF THEFT OF $10,000 WORTH OF GEMS

Police Decide Mysterious Robbery in Broker Clews's Home Was an "Inside Job" and Arrest Newest Servant on Suspicion.

Mrs. John H. Clews, of No. 47 West Fifty-eighth street, employed a remarkably pretty and intelligent maid ten days ago. The maid, who gave the name of Mary Charters, was held in $10,000 bail in Yorkville Police Court to-day on a charge of robbing Mrs. Clews of $10,000 worth of jewelry.

The accusation against the girl is based entirely upon suspicion. Beyond saying she took the jewels, she refuses to make any statement. Mrs. Clews was as surprised as any one in the house when the police fixed upon Mary Charters as the person guilty of the robbery.

Mr. Clews is a nephew of Henry Clews, a member of his firm and of the Stock Exchange. In a room on the second floor of his fifty-eighth street mansion he has a small safe. Up to a o'clock last night the safe contained about $10,000 worth of silverware and Mrs. Clews's $10,000 collection of jewelry.

Mr. Clews is positive the contents of the safe were intact at 6 o'clock. She went to the safe again at 9 o'clock and found that the entire collection of jewels had been abstracted. The silverware had not been disturbed. A gold chain, a large tag was also missing.

No time was lost in telephoning to the police, and inside of half an hour Detective O'Connor, of the East Fifty-first street station, was on the ground making an investigation. He learned that all the doors of the house had been closed and locked from 4 to 9 o'clock, and that none of the three servants had been outside the building during that time.

O'Connor carefully examined all the doors and windows. None of them had been forced. Every indication pointed to the fact that the maid had been forced. Every indication pointed to the fact that the maid had been forced.

Of the three servants in the house two have been in the employ of Mrs. Clews for many years. Their honesty is unquestioned. O'Connor heard that Mary Charters had been in the house only ten days. He questioned her closely and finally announced that he would have to take her to the station. There was a scene when the detective charged the girl with the theft. She was the most self-possessed of all prisoners in the house that he had seen. That the girl had not been out of the house after 6 o'clock was clearly established by other maids and members of the family. In fact she accounted for all but a few minutes of the three hours. In these few minutes, O'Connor says, she either passed the jewels to a confederate on the outside or hid them so cunningly in the house that no one has as yet been able to guess what she did with them.

When the girl was taken to the police court today the clerk and attendants were amazed at the charge against her. She wore a heavy veil that did not quite hide her regular features and her gown was out in the latest fashion. At the request of the detective Magistrate Crane held her for examination on Monday afternoon.

The stolen jewelry.

A list of the stolen property furnished to the police is as follows:

Diamond fleur de lis, $500; diamond horseshoe pin, $500; two solitaire rings.

400 DIE IN STORM AND MANY MISSING

Known losses of lives in the hurricane that swept Cuba and southern Florida total almost 400, but when full reports are received it is feared the number will be heavily increased.

In the tidal wave which swept Elliott Key on the Florida coast, engulfing the island and drowning 350 persons, nine barges, crowded with workmen, were carried away and no trace of them have been found. In addition a fleet of Florida fishing boats in the track of the storm are being vainly sought.

Reports from the interior points of Cuba are coming in slowly, but gradually adding to the death list and showing that the damage to the tobacco and fruit crops was exceptionally heavy.

Details of the storm on the Florida coast are also still lacking, and the extent of the hurricane's ravages is only surmised.

Advices from San Salvador tell of a tempest that brought death to many and wrought ruin in that section.

TIDAL WAVE SWEEP
350 TO DEATH.

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 20.—Elliott Key, a small island, twenty-five miles south of here, has been practically wiped out of existence and its population of 350 persons drowned. On the small steamer St. Lucia, which took shelter from the hurricane in the lee of the island, thirty-five more persons were drowned.

Another small steamer, used as a house-boat and sleeping quarters for laborers on railroad work, was wrecked at Long Key. Of the men on board forty-one have been saved. They were picked up clinging to wreckage by the steamer Jennie, a Spanish tramp.

Nine barges crowded with workmen that were tending to the houses were missing, and it is feared they have been lost with all on board.

Information of this, probably the greatest loss in the hurricane storm that swept over Southern Florida and Cuba, came to Miami by Capt. J. J. of the St. Lucia, who was rescued and brought to this city with sixty others, badly injured.

BY FRANK W. THORP.

BELMONT PARK, Oct. 20.—Rain always favors the bet of Hastings and for that reason Okenite was favorite in the White Plains Handicap with Smiling Tom. They were heavily backed, and Okenite won. Okenite made all the running and won cleverly from Kentucky Beau, who was pretty well strong out.

The Champion Steeplechase furnished a cracking finish between Colling and Hylas. These two moved to the front in the stretch after John P. and Alfay had tired of pace-making and in a thrilling drive Hylas won by a nose.

Valla was a strong favorite in the opening event, and she never gave the players a moment's uneasiness, making all the running and winning handsily from Merill. Frank Gill, the second choice, then in the final stage, Beau, a 7 to 1 chance, won the seven-furlong race for two-year-olds. Dissent, a 15 to 1 chance, backed to 7 to 1, beat Lamertine, a 19 to 1 shot for the place. The favorite, Hylas, had no second.

Running Water by a Neck.

In the Belmont Weight-for-Age race Nealson made the running, while Running Water trailed him. This order held for the mile and six furlongs. Then Running Water closed, and in a real hot drive he beat Nealson by a neck. The Cricket was fifty lengths away.

Miss Crawford Best.

Tommy Waddell made the running to the stretch, where Miss Crawford closed and won handsily by two lengths from Chimney Sweep. Who beat Tommy Waddell five lengths for the place.

Grand Stand Falls During Syracuse-Colgate Game and Crowd Is Tumbled in a Heap Thirty Feet to Ground.

YALE BEATS PENN STATE BY SMALL SCORE OF 10 TO 0.

Cornell Smothers Bowdoin 72 to 0, Middies Beat Lehigh, West Point Wins From Williams, Harvard Scores 44 to Springfield's 0, and Tigers Defeat Bucknell.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 20.—During the football game between Syracuse and Colgate this afternoon one of the grandstands, crowded with spectators, collapsed and fifty or more people were injured. The accident occurred during an exciting moment of the game, and hundreds of men and boys were on their feet yelling and jumping up and down. The weight was too much for the frail structure and the under-braces gave way, precipitating the long rows of seats and their human burden with a crash.

That more people were not seriously injured is regarded as a miracle. The grandstand was piled up on each other, forming a great mass of struggling arms and legs. Others were pinned down beneath the splintered timbers, and their screams of pain and cries for help were pitiful. Hundreds rushed to the rescue, and the players of both teams did heroic work in pulling spectators from beneath the broken pile of seats.

Ambulances and physicians responded quickly to the call for help and the more seriously injured were hurried to the nearest hospital. As there were many physicians at the game as spectators many of the injured had been attended when the hospital surgeons and the ambulances arrived.

The cause of the accident is not definitely known, though it is generally believed that the structure, which was temporary, was built of too frail timbers and the supports were not sufficiently tested before allowing the stand to be filled with people.

COULDEN TRIED TO BUY HIS RIVAL OFF, IT IS SAID

Independence League Charges Him with Offering Cash to Farrelly.

Among the witnesses who have been summoned to go before the Grand Jury in connection with the graft charges made by Charles F. Murphy is Congressman Joseph Goulden, of the Bronx, a Tammany Candidate for re-election. The Independence League has charged Mr. Goulden with trying to buy off a candidate who has been nominated to make the race against him.

The candidate is James Farrelly, one of the original Independence Leaguers. He is making an energetic canvass, and while the district is normally strongly Democratic a three-cornered fight makes the situation precarious.

It is said that Congressman Goulden took his pen in hand a few days ago and wrote a letter in which he made overtures that are construed by the Independence League people to constitute a violation of the law. It is charged that he advanced an offer to reimburse Mr. Farrelly for what expense he had incurred.

The offer to reimburse his rival for actual expenses would not have been so heinous, the Independence League people say, but Mr. Goulden is accused of naming a specific sum—a sum considerably in excess of the amount that Mr. Farrelly really spent. Around the Gilsey-Hoese it is reported that the letter is in the hands of the District Attorney.
